Financial Services Agency

About the Financial Services Agency (FSA)

Finance is like blood circulating in the human body—an appropriate supply of funds enhances the economy and people's lives.

The Financial Services Agency (FSA) engages in financial regulation with the aim of enhancing national welfare through sustainable corporate and economic growth and stable asset building, etc., by achieving a balance between

- (1) stability of the financial system and demonstration of financial intermediation functions,
- (2) user protection and user convenience, and
- (3) market fairness/transparency and market vigor even amid the rapid changes in the financial environment.

The Role of the FSA

The FSA is responsible for ensuring stability of Japan's financial system, protection of depositors, insurance policyholders and securities investors, and smooth finance through such measures as planning and policymaking concerning the financial system, inspection and supervision of private sector financial institutions, and surveillance of securities transactions. The FSA thereby plays extremely important roles for the sound development of the national economy.

FSA's symbol mark

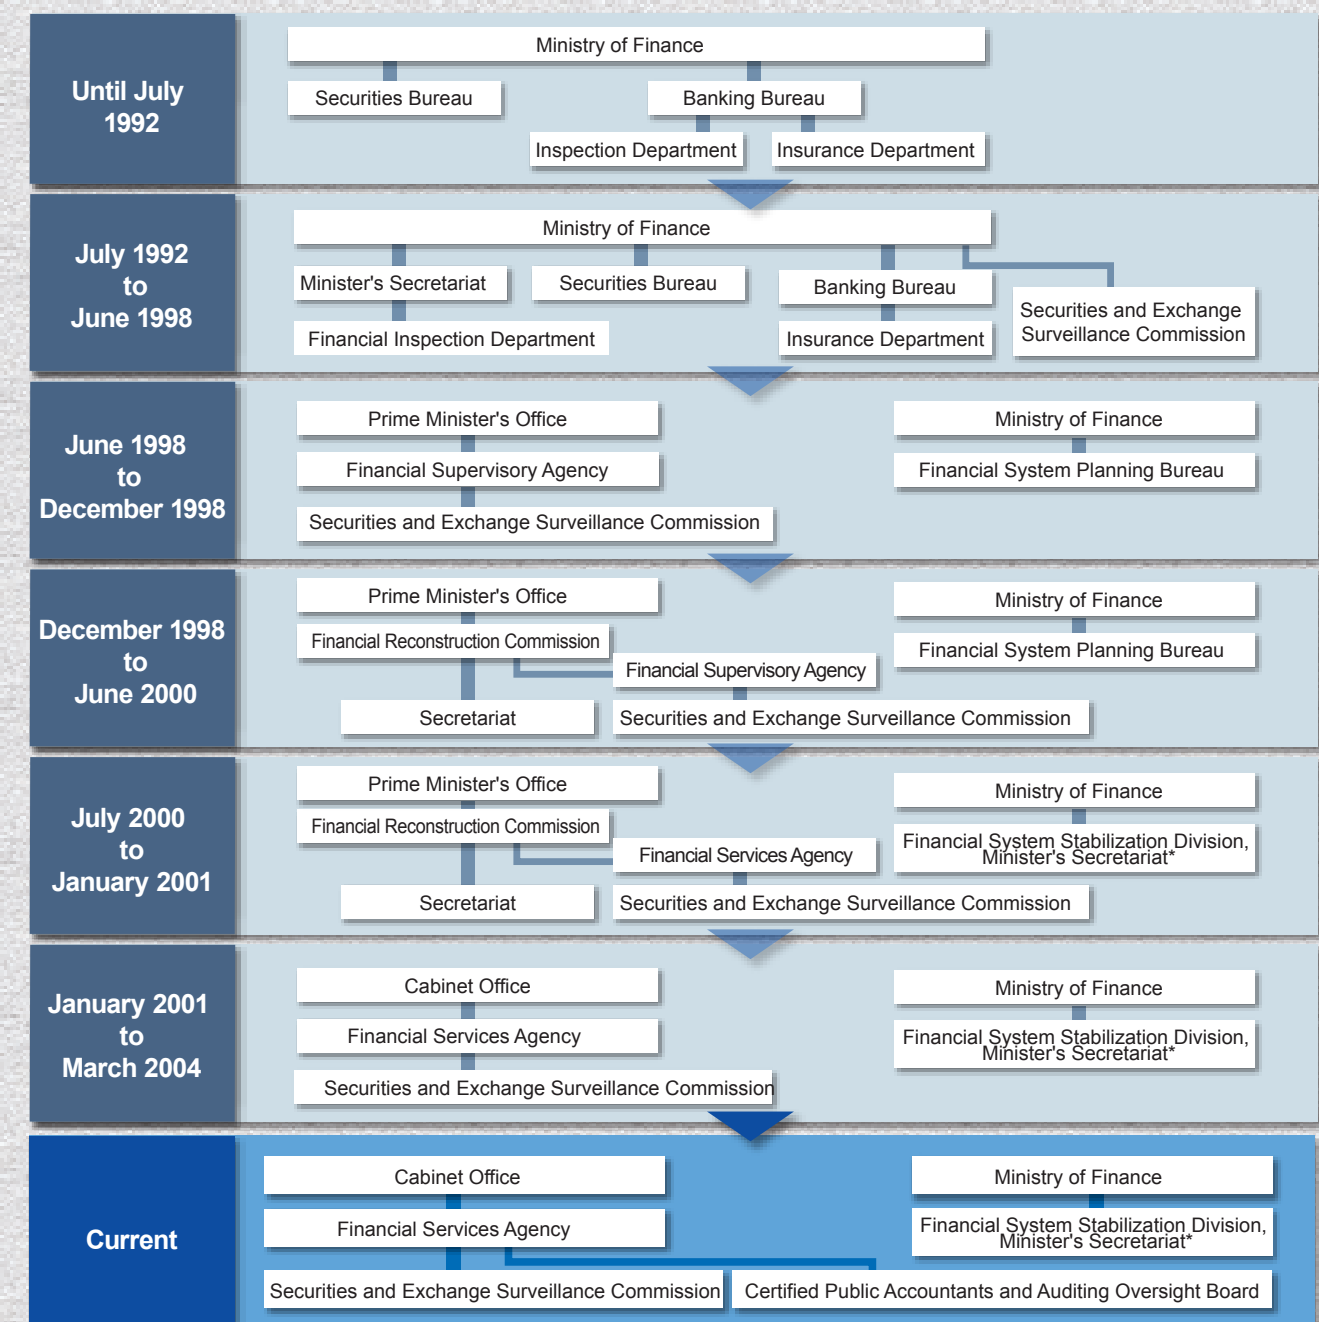

The FSA's symbol mark has been designed from "FSA"—the initial letters of the Financial Services Agency.
The middle "S" represents a smooth flow of finance, which is being guarded from both sides.
The light blue color expresses the smooth flow of finance and the transparency of the FSA's administration.

History of the FSA

June 1998	The Financial Supervisory Agency was established as an administrative organ (external organ of the Prime Minister's Office) responsible for inspection and supervision of private sector financial institutions and surveillance of securities transactions. With the establishment of the Financial Reconstruction Commission (FRC) in December of the same year, the Financial Supervisory Agency became an organization under the jurisdiction of the FRC.
July 2000	The Financial Services Agency (FSA) was established under the jurisdiction of the FRC through reorganization of the Financial Supervisory Agency. With this change, the FSA became responsible for planning of the financial system for which the Ministry of Finance had been responsible.
January 2001	By the reorganization of central government ministers, the FSA became an external organ of the Cabinet Office and, with concurrent abolishment of the FRC, the FSA took over the business concerning disposition of failed financial institutions.

FSA's Policies

Financial regulation and supervision have three major policy objectives: to ensure stability of the financial system; to enhance user protection and user convenience; and to establish fair and transparent markets.

These policy objectives have been shared for a long time among the authorities of many countries around the world without essential changes. However, financial situations are constantly changing, as represented by innovation of financial technologies and globalization of financial markets.

The FSA faces a major policy challenge to adapt the methods of financial regulation and supervision to these changes, and to improve their quality.

Strategy Development and Management Bureau

The functions of the Strategy Development and Management Bureau are largely divided into the following three.

Acting as the FSA's control tower

The Bureau makes overall coordination of matters concerning the entire FSA, such as strategic planning of financial administration and communication and coordination among departments within the FSA. From the viewpoint of the FSA's operation of activities based on the PDCA cycle, the Bureau collectively summarizes and publishes the results of financial administration in the previous program year and the financial administration policy for the current program year. It also engages in the reform of the FSA in order to constantly improve the quality of financial administration.

Playing a central role in financial diplomacy

In order to deepen international collaboration in the financial sector, the Bureau contributes to discussions on international financial regulations and works to strengthen the network and cooperation with overseas authorities.

Determining hidden risks in the financial system

The Bureau watches the status of the customer-oriented business conduct of distributors and the situation of common challenges facing financial institutions, etc. such as measures for anti-money laundering and cyber security. In addition, it monitors the status of not only the risks of individual financial institutions, but also the risks and stability of the entire financial system.

Policy and Markets Bureau

Building a stable and vigorous financial system and developing efficient and fair financial markets

The Policy and Markets Bureau mainly engages in the designing and planning of finance-related laws, regulations, and systems.

Specifically, the Bureau sets rules to be observed by financial institutions, etc. through establishment, amendment, and abolition of finance-related laws and regulations such as the Banking Act and the Financial Instruments and Exchange Act. It also works to build a stable and vigorous financial system and develop efficient and fair financial markets so as to enable people to invest assets with a sense of security and companies to smoothly procure funds.

In designing and planning laws, regulations, and systems, it is important to respond to changes in the ideal forms of financial services and financial institutions in line with the progress of digitalization, etc. made in recent years. Therefore, the Bureau formulates the grand design of the financial system in a forward-looking manner by incorporating the opinions of a wide range of stakeholders, including financial institutions and users, acquired through discussions at the Financial System Council and solicitation of public comments.

The Bureau is also in charge of supervising corporate governance reform and activities of certified public accountants, audit corporations, etc., examining and making dispositions on annual securities reports and other disclosure documents, and supervising financial instruments exchanges.

Supervision Bureau

Conducting supervisory administration using seamless on-site and off-site monitoring

The purpose of financial inspection and supervision is to achieve the sound and appropriate operation of services of financial institutions in order to maintain their credibility, ensure protection for depositors, etc., and facilitate financing, thereby contributing to the sound development of the national economy.

The Supervision Bureau carries out continuous and seamless on-site and off-site monitoring by gaining an understanding of actual conditions and holding dialogue, etc. according to each financial institution's size, characteristics, and probability of occurrence of serious problems in financial soundness or compliance. Based on the monitoring results, the Bureau implements supervisory measures or takes other actions as necessary to prevent occurrence of serious problems, and encourages financial institutions to make various voluntary efforts for realizing better practices through dialogue, etc.

The FSA aims to establish transparent and fair administration based on clear rules, in principle. Therefore, the Bureau formulates and publishes Supervisory Guidelines, which systematically organize matters such as the basic concept for inspection and supervision, points of attention in the conduct of administrative processes, and supervisory evaluation points, as manuals for officials engaging in the inspection and supervisory work.

Securities and Exchange Surveillance Commission

Acting as the guardian of the market

The mission of the Securities and Exchange Surveillance Commission (SESC) is to secure fairness and transparency in markets and protect investors. The SESC consists of a chairman and two commissioners appointed by the Prime Minister, and performs duties independently from the FSA.

The SESC's Executive Bureau engages in operations including market surveillance and monitoring of financial instruments business operators, etc., investigation of market misconduct such as insider trading, inspection of disclosure documents, and investigation of criminal cases that hinder the fairness of transactions.

If any statutory violation is identified as a result of these inspections or investigations, the SESC may make recommendations to the Commissioner of the FSA etc. to take administrative disciplinary actions or recommend for administrative monetary penalty payment order.

Certified Public Accountants and Auditing Oversight Board

Ensuring Confidence in Audit

The Certified Public Accountants and Auditing Oversight Board (CPAFOB) consists of a chairperson and nine commissioners appointed by the Prime Minister. The CPAFOB exercises its authority independently from the FSA.

The CPAFOB reviews and examines reports on Quality Control Reviews on audit firms conducted by the Japanese Institute of Certified Public Accountants, and if necessary, conducts on-site inspections. In case that the serious deficiencies are found in the firm's quality control, the CPAFOB recommends that the Commissioner of the FSA take administrative actions.

The CPAFOB implements the CPA examinations in a fair and facilitated manner. The CPAFOB also validate the disciplinary actions would be taken by the FSA against CPAs.

Through these activities, the CPAFOB strives to maintain and improve the audit quality and to ensure the confidence in audits in Japan.
